President of Serbia Aleksandar Vucic and Prime Minister of Albania Edi Rama signed an online deal on Monday under which citizens of both countries can enter the other country with only their IDs, instead of with passports as was the case until now. After the ceremony, Albanias Rama hailed the agreement as a positive step.

It is a good step that now Albania has freedom of movement with basically all countries, including Serbia, with which we signed freedom of movement [deals] between our citizens □ with no other document [necessary other] than ID cards. I think this is a very positive step, Rama told the online held press conference.
