Thousands of EU workers in British care homes risk falling foul of the legal requirement for them to register their status in the UK before a government deadline expires on 30 June, according to a new report published on Monday (25 January).

1 in 3 care workers have not heard of the UK Governments EU Settled Status Scheme and 1 in 2 do not know about the deadline, according to a survey of over 290 workers in UK care homes.

We are still in the middle of a pandemic, while the EUSS deadline for EU citizens is less than six months away, said Caitlin Boswell, author of the report for the Joint Council for the Welfare of Immigrants.
