Azerbaijan and Turkmenistan have signed a landmark agreement to jointly develop a long-disputed Caspian gas field, a move that could pave the way for the transit of Turkmenistan's massive gas reserves to Europe.

On January 21, Azerbaijan President Ilham Aliyev and Turkmenistan President Gurbanguly Berdymukhamedov signed a memorandum of understanding, via videoconference, on joint exploration of the hydrocarbon field now known as "Dostluk" or "Dostlug" □ friendship in their respective languages.
