Tomislav Tomasevic, who has been in office as Zagreb's mayor since the beginning of June, announced fresh changes to the city's management on Tuesday, including abolishing free parking spaces in front of healthcare facilities.

He said that public company Zagrebparking had asked to suspend former mayor Milan Bandić's decision to make parking in front of all healthcare institutions in Zagreb free.

I will accept this proposal because the epidemiological situation is currently favourable, and there is no pressure on these institutions, Tomasevic told a press conference.
