Turkey hosted the 63rd round of consultative talks with Greece in its capital Ankara on Wednesday, according to Turkish Foreign Ministry.

On Twitter, the ministry said that the "63rd round of Consultative Talks between Turkey and Greece was held in Ankara today."

The talks, which began in March 2002, aim to resolve bilateral disputes in the Aegean and Mediterranean, and lay the groundwork for a fair, lasting, and comprehensive settlement to outstanding issues in the Aegean Sea.
