Serbian President Aleksandar Vucic said that controversial Kosovo Serb businessman and politician Milan Radoicic, accused of leading an armed group that killed a Kosovo policeman on Sunday, will be questioned about the violence.

Serbian President Aleksandar Vucic said on Wednesday evening that Milan Radoicic, deputy leader of the Belgrade-backed Srpska Lista political party in Kosovo, is in Serbia and will face questions about his alleged role in violence in the north of Kosovo on Sunday.

Vucic said that Radoicic faces questions after one Kosovo policemen was killed and two wounded in a clash between police and an armed group of Serbs near Banjska monastery. Three of the Serbs were also killed.
