The Hungarian leader has been able to build a coalition of like-minded allies who share his strategic goal — creating a Europe of nation states.

Under the leadership of Hungarian Prime Minister Viktor Orbán, a new far-right euroskeptic group — the Patriots for Europe — has become the third-largest bloc in the European Parliament.

The success of Orbán's initiative is a remarkable achievement. The Hungarian leader has managed to reorganize Europe's far right around his own image and that of his Fidesz party, which was relegated to the political wilderness after leaving the center-right European Peoples Party group in 2019.
