The United States confirmed it is studying a request by Armenia to sign a deal that would allow Washington to transfer civil nuclear technology to Yerevan, a State Department spokesperson said.

The U.S. Government does not share details of the negotiation process, but we can share that the State Department is giving Armenias request for a 123 Agreement the proper attention and due consideration, a State Department spokesperson said in written comments to CivilNet Tuesday.

In 2022, Armenia and the United States signed a Memorandum of Understanding Concerning Civil Nuclear Cooperation.
