Armenia's relations with the Russia-led military bloc Collective Security Treaty Organization (CSTO) have passed the "point of no return," Prime Minister Nikol Pashinyan said Wednesday.

Speaking at a parliamentary session in the countrys capital Yerevan, Pashinyan said Armenia does not veto any document being discussed in the Russian-led alliance because it considers itself outside of it, reminding that it suspended its participation in the organization.

According to Pashinyan, the current situation between Armenia and the CSTO makes Yerevans return to active participation in the alliance "increasingly difficult, if not impossible.
