Thai and Cambodian soldiers exchanged fire at a disputed border area early on May 28, prompting the two sides to hold talks to end the stand-off.

Thailand accused Cambodian soldiers of entering the disputed area in violation of an agreement and firing at its soldiers when confronted. Thai troops returned fire.

There were no injuries or casualties in the clashes that took place near the border area in Thailand's north-eastern Ubon Ratchathani province, Major-General Winthai Suvaree, a spokesman for the Thai army, told reporters.
