India is exploring strategic investments in Greece, targeting defense industries, ports, tourism, and potential labor agreements, as part of its broader effort to strengthen its presence in Europe.

New Delhi has shown interest in investing in Greeces defense sector, particularly the Hellenic Aerospace Industry (EAB) and Hellenic Defense Systems (EAS). This aligns with broader European defense rearmament trends, and follows Athens recent strategic partnerships with countries like Israel.

Indian defense firms have expressed preliminary interest, while military cooperation between the two nations has intensified in recent years.
