According to the results of a survey conducted among European Union residents, the majority of respondents spoke in favor of further support for Ukraine and the acceptance of Ukrainian refugees.

This was reported on the European Commission website with reference to the results of the Eurobarometer survey.

In particular, 76% of the Europeans surveyed said that they support providing financial and humanitarian support to Ukraine in view of the full-scale Russian invasion, and 80% agreed that the EU should accept people fleeing the war.
