Armenia does not set itself the task of breaking off relations with Russia. Armenian Prime Minister Nikol Pashinyan said this in the Czech Republic on June 13, Radio Liberty reports.

"I said that our parliament recently passed a law on the start of membership in the European Union. Now we have very close cooperation with the EU. But on the other hand, we do not have the task of breaking relations with Russia, because our foreign policy is balanced and balancing. And this is our strategy," Pashinyan stated.
