Singapore and Indonesia have inked three key agreements to strengthen cooperation in clean energy and sustainable development, in a win-win partnership that marks a significant milestone in their green partnership.

The memorandums of understanding were inked on June 13 during a visit to Jakarta by Singapores Minister-in-charge of Energy and Science and Technology, Dr Tan See Leng, and Indonesias Minister for Energy and Mineral Resources, Dr Bahlil Lahadalia.

Describing the agreements as a step forward in the two countries shared vision for a low-carbon and resilient future, Dr Tan said the deals were mutually beneficial.
