China's ongoing criticism of the Japanese premier's comments on Taiwan is "inconsistent with the facts," Japan's ambassador to the UN said in a letter to the UN chief.

Kazuyuki Yamazaki's Thursday letter responds to China's latest message to the UN on Monday, in which China's permanent representative, Fu Cong, raised concerns over Japanese Prime Minister Sanae Takaichi's "provocative remarks" on Taiwan.

Fu said on Monday that the letter sent by Japan's permanent representative to the UN on Nov. 24 was "making unreasonable arguments, dodging the key issues, while groundlessly accusing China and seeking to shift blame. China firmly opposes this.
