The European Parliament presidents power play is without precedent, diplomats wrote in a note seen by POLITICO.

European Parliament President Roberta Metsola is trying to push through a controversial law on scanning child abuse content online even though it has been repeatedly slapped down by her own chamber, according to a document seen by POLITICO.

In a step that diplomats deem without precedent, the top EU politician has asked member countries in the Council to approve a bill that her own Parliament shot down in a plenary vote in March.
