
ARMENIA, INDIA DISCUSS LOCAL PRODUCTION OF PINAKA ROCKETS

Armenia and India are discussing the possibility of establishing production and assembly of Pinaka Mk-II rocket ammunition in Armenia.

If an agreement is reached, the project could deepen defence-industrial ties between the two countries and help Armenia secure more stable supplies of ammunition for its expanding artillery capabilities, the report said, according to Indian defence news portal idrw.org.

Armenia has already acquired Indian-made Pinaka Mk-II guided rockets as well as extended-range unguided Pinaka rockets. It remains unclear, however, which variant would form the basis of any potential local production programme.
