An annual conference on foreign information manipulation opened in Vilnius this week with a sensitive question on its agenda: Can the United States be considered a threat to Europe's information space?

And the question caused a diplomatic incident.

EU DisinfoLabs annual #Disinfo2026 conference, held in Vilnius on 7 and 8 October, brings together researchers, journalists, civil society groups, technology specialists and policymakers working on foreign information manipulation and interference, known as FIMI in EU jargon.
