Europes anchor of stability has broken loose.

Just weeks after Chancellor Olaf Scholz announced that his fractious three-way coalition had buried the hatchet, declaring we must not be preoccupied with ourselves at a time of global turmoil, the civil war within his government is back with a vengeance.

One might expect to find the trigger for the alliances conflict in Middle East policy or its stance toward Russia. In fact, the latest fight concerns a subject even more top of mind for many Germans: Das Auto.
