Armenian Prime Minister Nikol Pashinyan addressed a range of pressing domestic and foreign policy matters during a press conference on Wednesday, offering insight into Yerevan's evolving stance on regional ties, security alliances, and national institutions.

Armenia seeks to reshape its foreign policy and internal structure, Prime Minister Nikol Pashinyan said during a wide-ranging press conference on Wednesday, touching on relations with Russia, Türkiye, and the European Union, as well as the role of the Armenian Apostolic Church and regional connectivity talks.

Pashinyan reiterated that Armenia wishes to maintain normal and friendly relations with Russia based on mutual respect. Addressing the recent suspension of Russian TV broadcasts in Armenia, he emphasised that Yerevan is not seeking confrontation but claimed some Russian channels had crossed all boundaries.
